

Knowledge Lists

The knowledge list was assembled based on the 2005 job analysis of veterinary technicians in internal medicine. This list has been assembled by veterinary technician, internal medicine subject matter experts.

A qualified candidate will know, understand, be familiar with, recognize, utilize, and/or intuit the disease states and conditions contained in the knowledge list. The knowledge list can be used as an aid in preparation for sitting the examination in your internal medicine subspecialty. The topics listed are in addition to your skill list, and though some overlap will occur, any topic that appears on either list is suitable information for examination. However, unlike the skills list, you are not required to provide proof of competence for the knowledge lists. The examination will provide this information.

I have read the above information and the advanced knowledge list in the following area of expertise (please check only one)

_____ Small Animal Internal Medicine

_____ Large Animal Internal Medicine

_____ Cardiology

_____ Neurology

_____ Oncology

Please acknowledge that you have read the above statement and return this form with your application packet.

Signed _____

Please print applicants name _____